

FIGURE 2.27. General mechanism of eukaryotic protein synthesis. The major steps include transcription of the DNA gene sequence into the messenger RNA template in the nucleus of the cell, translation of the DNA codons of that gene into amino acids, and their assembly into polypeptides in the cytoplasm. Important mediators of this process include transfer RNAs, splicing elements, and ribosomes.