FIGURE 8.22. Alternative splicing. Multiple proteins are known to be made from the α-tropomyosin gene by alternatively splicing in different cell types. The orange boxes in the primary transcript represent introns; all other boxes are exons. For each tissue type the splicing form is shown by lines connecting the exons that are used.

Evolution © 2007 Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory Press