

FIGURE 16.3. The red arrows show a gene moving randomly through a two-dimensional habitat, over 0, 1, 2, 3, 4 generations. In the first generation, the distribution of positions might be complicated (blue, top), but soon the sum of several random movements approaches a normal distribution (blue, bottom). Only movements along the x-axis are shown in the distributions.