

FIGURE 24.3. Slight changes in the development of an organism can cause sudden shifts to a new outcome. (A) Development can be seen as analogous to a ball rolling down a gradient. Slight tilts to the surface cause a shift to a new channel. (B) The chance of developing to phenotype X rather than Y suddenly changes as the tilt passes a critical point.